PROSPECTS

The Tar Heels should be somewhat better than last season, although a great improvement over last year's 12-15 overall record should not be expected.

Only one regular is missing from the losing ball team, guard Howard Deasy. There will be more depth and a little more experience. Newcomers have shown good development in pre-season drills.

With the exception of Deasy, regulars Vince Grimaldi, Albert Lifson, Jack Wallace and Paul Likins return. Reserves Jippy Carter, Ernie Schwarz and Bob Phillips are back and regular center Harold (Bud) Maddie will be ready after a year's layoff with a shoulder injury.

In addition, the Tar Heels will get a fine transfer student in Paul Anisko, a former Villanova freshman. Jack Powell of High Point and Jerry Vayda of Bayonne, N. J., are freshmen most likely to see considerable varsity service.

The biggest difficulty new coach Frank McMcGuire has faced, besides, of course, meeting a new team, schedule and installing a new system, is finding a combination. Lifson and Carter ran into scholastic difficulties at the start of the season. They are ineligible until the Dixie Classic late in December under University regulations and Anisko is ineligible until that time by Southern Conference rules. All three figure prominently in overall plans and the team will have to be revamped to make adjustments for the trio after the season gets underway.

Lifson is the big gun of the returning players. He was the University's third highest scorer in history last season and the highest scoring freshman when he hit for 425 points. Grimaldi and Wallace have scored more than 300 points in their two previous seasons.

While the rest of the players have seen plenty of action, none of them have distinguished themselves as scorers. Maddie was not a high scorer as a sophomore and Likins—in his freshman year—averaged less than seven points a game.

The 1952-53 schedule is primarily a Conference slate with twelve of seventeen loop institutions scheduled. New York University comes here in February for the only intersectional game. Holy Cross is the opening round Dixie Classic opponent.

COACHES

Frank Joseph McGuire succeeds Tom Scott as head basketball coach this season and comes to Chapel Hill with a fine record as a high school and college coach. Scott resigned last summer to accept the coaching position at Bartlesville, Oklahoma with the Phillips 66 Oilers.

McGuire comes directly from St. John's of Brooklyn where his 1951-52 team went to the finals of the N.C.A.A. championships in Seattle before losing to Kansas. That game climaxed a brilliant five-year reign in which McGuire became one of the nation's most celebrated coaches.

McGuire was a great high school football, baseball and basketball star at Brooklyn's Xavier high school and later matriculated at St. John's with numerous athletic honors. He continued his brilliant athletic career in college in baseball and basketball (St. John's had no football team) and returned to Xavier as a coach.

FRANK J. McGUIRE

After turning out fine teams at Xavier, he was selected over nearly a thousand candidates to take over for Joe Lapchick at St. John's. And the choice has rewarded the St. John's following, for McGuire's teams there won 103 games and lost only 36.

Four McGuire-coached St. John's teams went to the N. I. T. tournament in five years and two of them traveled to N.C.A.A. meets.

His high school coaching was interrupted by Navy duty and some of it was spent at Chapel Hill in the Pre-Flight unit. He made many friends during his local sojourn and says now that he always wanted to return.

North Carolina sports fans will long remember his contest with Kentucky in the N.C.A.A. regional playoffs last season at Raleigh when his St. John's team defeated the mighty Wildcats. The contest was the second of the season against the Ruppmen, with Kentucky thoroughly trouncing the St. John's club at Lexington earlier in the year. The revenge game will not soon be forgotten.

Last season St. John's played before more fans than any college basketball team in the nation, with 269,396 spectators turning out to watch the colorful cage group.

McGuire is a genial, good-natured, well-liked coach who has been in great demand as a speaker. He has made many friends in this area already and commands respect from his coaching opponents.

He was born in Manhattan on November 8, 1914. He is married and has two daughters and a son. He lives on Oakwood Drive, Chapel Hill, but from September to March Woollen Gymnasium, Room 207-A, is home!

JAMES AMBROSE FREEMAN is McGuire's assistant and comes here with a fine reputation as a scout, coach and student of the game. "Buck" Freeman is a former head coach at St. John's, Scranton University and the Scranton professional team. He has been freshman coach at Long Island University and a highly successful prep school football mentor.

James A. Freeman

He has served as an athletic director and in many other important positions in athletics. At the same time he has had a successful career in the banking business.

Freeman is well known in coaching circles as a scout. He has called to the attention of coaches throughout the nation many young ball players who have gained widespread fame.

His duties at Chapel Hill will include scouting and coaching. He will assist with the varsity and handle the junior varsity. He has arranged an attractive junior varsity schedule and expects to develop several promising young players for the varsity team.

He is single and lives close to the gymnasium. He is a stickler for details and keeps tab on the squad's every activity. He has an elaborate filing system covering every phase of instruction on the game, player details, scouting reports, movies and other valuable data.

McGuire calls him the best aide in the business.

HISTORY

There was basketball activity at Carolina as far back as 1903, and the late Dr. R. B. Lawson obtained a rule book and fielded a team in 1906. However, it was not until 1911 that "Philly" Ritch and some of his Charlotte buddies introduced the game seriously.

Then it remained for the teeming Nineteen Twenties to bring Carolina recognition as a truly basketball-conscious school. The impetus for that era was furnished by Major Fred Boye of World War I, who coached the Tar Heels in 1920 and 1921. The 1921 team won the State championship.

The 1922 quint captured the Southern Conference championship and the 1923 team annexed the South Atlantic title. Those teams had no regular coaches and were merely escorted to the wars by Coaches Bob and Bill Fetzer, experts in other sports but confessedly no basketball men. Norman Shepard was engaged to coach the 1924 team which swept through an entire season of nineteen games undefeated and then triumphed in four consecutive tournament games to take the conference title.

This team, captured by Winton Green, has since been recognized by the Helms Foundation as National champions, and one of its members, clever Jack (Spratt) Cobb, was named to the Foundation's College Basketball Hall of Fame. Cobb was named this year as the fifteenth player ever honored. George Glamack is also a Hall of Fame member.

Both the Carmichaels, Billy and Cartwright, the latter an All-America star, were superlative players of that era. Bill Dodderer, Monk McDonald, brother Sam McDonald, Bill Devin, Curtis (Sis) Perry and Carlyle Shepard were among the other greats. They played the slow, methodical game of the time, but they were skilled and graceful artists and their marksmanship was superb. The conference tournaments were held in Atlanta and were gaudy spectacles.

Bo Shepard, brother of Norman and Carlyle, was one of the most successful of Carolina's coaches in the days that followed. There were great championship teams in the Thirties when the McCachren brothers and a host of other stars came here from Charlotte. Glamack, Jim Jordan and John (Hook) Dillon became All-Americans of a still later era, with the 1948 team Eastern NCAA champions and runners-up for the National championship crown.

In the cycle since then basketball was under the direction of Tom Scott, an imported Kansan, and assistant Pete Mullis, himself a former great star of his day. After a successful six year tenure producing 100 victories and 63 defeats, Scott returned to the green pastures of the midwest to take over the famed Phillips 66 Oilers.

The 1952-53 season marks the first for Frank J. McGuire as head mentor and James A. (Buck) Freeman as his assistant.

PICK-OFFS

The late Dr. Robert Lawson (golfer Estelle Page's dad) was the "father" of basketball at Chapel Hill . . . As far back as 1906 he was running Tar Heels around a court and having them pop at devices just a few seed removed from peach baskets . . . The man who really got an organized team going, however, playing a regular schedule, was Marvin (Philly) Ritch of Charlotte, and the year was 1911.

Ritch was not the first coach, but the first captain . . . The first coach was Nat Cartmell, best remembered for his work with the Tar Heel track team . . . Four of the first seven captains were Charlotteans . . . Junius Smith was leader of the 1912 team . . . Meb Long, a really great player and now a building and loan company executive in Charlotte, captained both the 1914 and 1915 teams, while Reynolds Cuthberson, currently a Charlotte banker, headed the 1919 quint.

Charlotte has sent more fine basketball players to Carolina than any other city . . . The only other two-year captain was Charlottean Earl Ruth (1937-38), now Catawba College basketball coach . . . Four of the Charlotte McCachren brothers were Carolina basketball captains: Dave (1934), Jim (1936), Bill (1939), and George or "Tobe" (1943) . . . Jim McCachren rates among the all-time Carolina basketball greats, as does "Monk" McDonald, (now Dr. Angus Morris Mc.) of the same city, 1923 captain and 1925 coach.

Among other Queen City lads who helped to make basketball history at Chapel Hill: Clyde E. (Pete) Mullis, former assistant varsity coach and P. E. professor; Stewart (Snooks) Aitken, 1935 captain; John Purser, Carr Purser, Sam McDonald, Tom Alexander (1932 captain), Ike Minor, Brodie Nalle, Jenks Hutchison, Tyre Reid, Bob Reid and Artie Newcombe . . . These are only a few of them.

There have been other brother acts, in addition to the McCachrens and the McDonalds ("Monk" and Sam) . . . Carlyle Shepard, for instance, captained the 1921 team . . . Norman Shepard coached the famous 1924 team . . . and George E. (Bo) Shepard, was varsity coach from 1932 through 1935 . . . Billy Carmichael captained the 1920 team while brother Cart captained the 1922 team.

Carolina's first state championship team was in 1921, with Major Fred Boye coach . . . Carolina won its first conference title in 1922 without a regular coach . . . Norman Shepard's 1924 team is the only Tar Heel team in history to go undefeated . . . It won 19 consecutive regular season games and then took four straight in the conference tournament in Atlanta to win the title . . . It was later designated as national champion by the Helms Foundation, and one of its stars, Jack Cobb, was named "player of the year" and has a place in the Helms Hall of Fame.

The Tar Heels won the first Southern Conference tournament (in Atlanta) they entered and then repeated three of the next four years . . . The 1923 team, which captured the South Atlantic championship, did not have a regular coach . . . "Monk" McDonald was captain and in 1925 he coached the team to a Southern Conference title.

Fourteen head coaches have served at Carolina . . . Ben Carnevale coached the Southern Conference championship team of 1945 . . . He was also mentor of the 1946 team which was defeated in the conference tournament finals but went on to win the Eastern NCAA title . . . Bo Shepard and Walter Skidmore coached the Tar Heels to Conference titles in 1935 and 1936, respectively . . . Bill Lange had the last Conference winner in 1940. Getting back to Charlotte, six teams in a row (1934-1939) were captained by Charlotteans.

"Cart" Carmichael was Carolina's first All-American (1923-24) . . . Probably the most famous of the Tar Heel All-Americans was George Glamack, Helms "player of the year" in both 1940 and 1941 . . . The most famous Tar Heel non-All American in college was "Bones" McKinney, who earlier played at N. C. State . . . As widely publicized as any player Carolina has turned out was John (Hook) Dillon, member of the 1946 Eastern NCAA champions . . . Carolina's 1951-52 team holds the honor of running up the highest score of any Tar Heel team in history, 100 against Furman in a pre-Christmas game . . . Tom Scott tutored Carolina's only basketball bowl team . . . His 1948-49 team won the Camelia Bowl game at Lafayette, La., defeating Arizona . . . Scott, incidentally, was himself a great player, member of the Henry Clothiers team of Wichita, Kansas, which won the National AAU title in 1931 . . . Frank McGuire also played pro basketball, performing for the famous Brooklyn Visitations.

UNIVERSITY

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is in a very real sense the mother of the hundreds of state colleges and universities that are turning out thousands of students every year throughout the nation.

These institutions had their humble beginning in the dark days of the American Revolution when the University at Chapel Hill was provided for in the State Constitution adopted at Halifax.

The University was chartered in 1789 and became in 1795 the first state university in America to open its doors to students. Dr. Joseph Caldwell, a Princeton graduate, was its first president.

Davie Was Moving Spirit

Leading citizens of the state joined in sponsoring the University. History accords the principal role to William Richardson Davie, the moving spirit in the band of men responsible for its provision, chartering, location and dedication.

When the University opened, the physical plant consisted of a single building, Old East dormitory, which is still in use today, the oldest structure on any state university campus in the country.

The faculty of two members waited around almost a month until the first student, Hinton James, walked in from the seacoast town of Wilmington, 200 miles away.

From its beginning the University enjoyed a steady, healthy growth. In 1860 it stood at the forefront of American universities and had the second largest student body in America.

Closed For Five Years

Although it survived the War Between the States, it was closed for five years during the Reconstruction period (1870-75). The road back after that war was long and arduous.

President Kemp P. Battle began the task of rebuilding, and by the opening of the 20th century he and President George T. Winston and President Edwin A. Alderman had succeeded in recapturing much of the institution's former prestige.

Great material expansion followed the first World War. Enrollment increased rapidly, and a six million dollar building program added many needed classroom buildings and dormitories. Membership in the Association of American Universities, a group of institutions usually regarded as the foremost in America, came in 1925.

In the depth of the depression of the early thirties the State Legislature directed that the State College at Raleigh, the Woman's College at Greensboro, and the University at Chapel Hill be consolidated, and the unification process became the responsibility of the Trustees. Dr. Frank P. Graham, then head of the University at Chapel Hill, was elected president of the consolidated University. Dr. Robert B. House was named Dean of Administration and in 1945 Chancellor of the University at Chapel Hill and vice-president of the consolidated University.

Enrollment continued to increase. In 1941 it had reached a civilian record up to that time of 4,108, and in 1943 the total went to approximately 5,500 for both civilian and military groups.

Following World War II, with the great influx of veterans, registration soared to a peak of 7,600 in the fall of 1948. The enrollment now is approximately 6,000.

Wide-Flung Boundaries

The boundaries of the University campus are co-terminus with the boundaries of the State. In addition to students and residents, the University has approximately 1,300 students enrolled in correspondence courses and hundreds in off-campus extension classes and college centers. The University Extension Division serves more than half a million citizens of the State annually with its various publications, lectures, institutes, conferences, contests and radio programs.

The University at Chapel Hill comprises 14 schools and colleges—the General College, College of Arts and Sciences, School of Education, School of Business Administration, Graduate School, Law School, School of Medicine, School of Pharmacy, School of Dentistry, School of Public Health, School of Library Science, School of Nursing, School of Journalism and School of Social Work. The Division of Health Affairs was established in 1949 for the purpose of integrating the work of all the health professional schools and the Teaching Hospital in the teaching and research programs within the University. The Division includes the School of Medicine, the Teaching Hospital, and the Schools of Pharmacy, Dentistry, Public Health and Nursing.

The faculty numbers approximately 500.

The physical plant of the University embraces almost 1,700 acres and some 77 permanent buildings valued at approximately $42,000,000.
